The company size of the client is the metric you need to know in order to license fonts.

You don't have to gather any information about their number of computers, web traffic, app downloads...

The License can allow one third party like a graphic designer to use the fonts on their behalf. It is the ultimate client (and not the design studio) who holds the license. That also means that if a graphic designer needs the typefaces to work for that client, the client's license can be used.

If the number of employees the Licensee has increases, the license needs to be upgraded. Please get in touch with Errea.

We offer just one type of commercial licence:

the company size of the client is the metric you need to know in order to license fonts. It covers every type of device, use, font file format...

— You can install the typeface on as many computers as you need.

— You can use the typography for any medium: print, digital, branding...

— You can use the typography without any subscription, with a single payment.
